RACING AFTER SEPTEMBER IS STILL POSSIBLE.

Track Owners Anxious to Go Ahead and Test the New Agnew-Perkins Laws Sheepshead Bay Is the Stun

It is not a certainty that racing will end on the New York tracks when the new Agnew-Perkins laws go into effect on September 1. At least that is the information that comes to THE Stx from a reliable source. When the various track owners met here on Thursday to discuss the outlook several racing associations express a willingness to go ahead with the original schedule pending a test of the new laws in the courts.

It is understood that the representatives of the Coney Island Jockey Club, which is scheduled to race twelve days in the early part of September, did not favor this plan with much enthusiasm, whereupon it was suggested that the Sheepshead Bay dates might be assumed by the Saratoga Racing Association, which would extend the meeting at the Spa until September 10. event it was pointed out that the Futurity and other rich stakes could be run off up the State and that test cases might be brought in Saratoga county.

If this plan could not be carried out it was suggested that the Belmont Park meeting in Nassau county could be brought forward to fill the dates already allotted to the Coney Island Jockey Club, after which Gravesend could go ahead, followed by meetings at Jamaica and Aqueduct, that would wind up the local season on November 1 or perhaps earlier.
